

Fixing feral cats aids quality of life

KUDOS TO THE CITY COUNCIL for passing legislation allowing for the humane care of feral cats in our community ("Helping feral cats and their patrons," Nov. 19)

The Maryland SPCA works closely with the wonderful cat caretakers featured in the article. We provide the spay and neuter service for these amazing caretakers (often in conjunction with other groups, such as the Maryland Feline Society). Hundreds of cats have been helped by this special partnership.

Fixing feral cats means that animals that would otherwise either breed uncontrollably or be trapped and euthanized now have a chance to survive and are not creating a nuisance in our neighborhoods.

The article did a good job highlighting one way people can come together and make a difference in our city.

AILEEN GABBEY

Baltimore

.....
The writer is executive director of the Maryland SPCA.